The Agency of the Unsaid: Collectivities between Emergence and Submergence

There is a growing interest in materiality and in the material aspects of phenomena regarding the workings of the human species. In reaction to the centrality of language which characterized 20th century's philosophies in all its heterogeneous iterations, this opposition is often thought of as a contrast between a material space and a symbolic space. In this talk we will propose, instead, an integration of the two spaces by drawing on some of Jacques Lacan's key insights. In particular, we will put forth the idea of an unsaid which works not only at the level of individual subjects - as in the paradigmatic case of the analysand's unconscious - but also at the level of collectivities.
